THE SENATE CONDEMNS ITSELF.

For more than two months congress has been in session and in that time the senate has accomplished nothing. Could there be a stronger argument for a radical change in the selection of senators in order to take a little of the disdainful conceit out of them and make them amenable to the will of the people whom they are supposed to represent?

Three big issues have been before the senate, and in each of them the country is vitally interested. Yet these smug statesmen, the majority of them millionaires, assemble at two o'clock in the afternoon, waste a few hours and then adjourn, day after day. No wonder the American people are disgusted and are demanding with an increasing insistence that the election of senators be by direct popular vote.

This question is still before a senate committee, and will perhaps remain there for a long time, notwithstanding the fact that it was disposed of by the house of representatives many weeks ago.

The Canadian reciprocity agreement is also tied up in committee and if its friends are not on the alert will be kept there.

The status of Lorimer, the boodle product from Illinois, is as yet undecided. Meanwhile the members of the senate suffer his contaminating presence and continue to dillydally over the method by which he is to be expelled. It is a national disgrace that he was not ousted immediately after the convening of the extraordinary session called by President Taft.

The policy of inaction on these important issues has shown that the senate is wholly out of sympathy with popular thought and political progress. These are questions that immediately affect the interests of the masses of the country, but with a few exceptions the senators refuse to give them fair treatment.

The third committee has just been appointed to investigate the purchase of a seat for Lorimer, but now it has been thrown into confusion and will doubtless waste a few more weeks before it gets down to business.

By this time the obstructionists should have been able to learn what the people want. They filibustered reciprocity to death in the regular sessions and now that the president has again forced the issue upon them they are treacherously resorting to the amendment plan of attack.

Concerning all three of these questions the demand of the country is for immediate action. Talk has gone on long enough. There is nothing more to say. The public's patience is exhausted. It is time now for those senators who think themselves above the people of the nation to stand up and say so without further equivocation.

A PRINTER'S EPITAPH.

George V. Millett, an artist and son of the late Henry S. Millett, who was one of the first printers in this part of the country, recently found among the papers his father left a "Printer's Epitaph." The epitaph was written by Mr. Millett in 1853. It bears the name of the town in which it was conceived, Fond Du Lac, Wis. This is the epitaph as it was written 58 years ago:

Here lies his form, a type of matter dead!

Bear no imposing stone to mark the spot;

But, fast locked up within his narrow bed,

May all his errors be for aye forgot.

His rule he left, a token of his love,

Revised, corrected, may be set above.

—San Bernardino Index.

John D. Rockefeller objects to the dingy depots in a number of the eastern cities. If he could only find time to check up his railroad stocks he would perhaps find that he owns a number of the buildings.

All the brass doorknobs have been stolen from the city hall in Chicago. You can't tell what the politicians will take when circumstances make it unsafe for them to dig into the public treasury.

Just as British fears of a German invasion are allayed in a measure, along comes J. P. Morgan, ostensibly to attend the coronation.

Mexico is now engaged in trying to save herself from her friends.

A SNOB IN UNIFORM.

Colonel Joseph Garrard, the uniformed snob in command of the cavalry post at Fort Meyer, deserves dismissal from the United States army for conduct unbecoming an officer, rather than the comparatively mild rebuke of a reprimand from the secretary of war. His official disapproval of Private Frank Bloom's ambition to become a lieutenant on the ground that the soldier's parents are Jews, is an astoundingly flagrant offense. It can scarcely be discussed in sober language, for indignation flares into a rage at so gratuitous an insult to millions of patriotic American citizens.

Garrard is unfit to command a squad let alone a post. He is a shallow-brained bigot of the worst type who should be stripped of all authority and put where he may never again have the privilege of expressing himself in the name of the people of the United States.

Young Bloom enlisted and with fine grit set about preparing himself for the examination for appointment as a lieutenant. In so doing he displayed exactly those qualities that make great officers and his desire to win shoulder straps should have been encouraged by every officers with whom he came in contact. But the chief of the post where he served, after having noted the fact that his parents were Jews, wrote across his application for admission to the examination this outrageous comment:

The man is undoubtedly honest and upright, ambitious and deserving, but for the reasons stated I would not desire him in my command as an officer and a social and personal associate. From an experience of many years I have found, except in a few cases, few communities where Jews are received as desirable social associates.

It is almost unbelievable that a colonel in the army could be such a poor excuse for either an officer or a man. He perhaps is one of the "pink tea boys" of the service who knows a good deal more about flirting at a post dance or reception than commanding men. There are a lot of these worthless idlers in the nation's uniform. They assume a fictitious superiority when, as a matter of fact, they would soon be objects of charity if they had to work for a living and stand among their fellows unilluminated by the glitter of buttons and braid.

Probably more money is now available for investment in mines than at any previous time in recent years and the mines are not being found. It is not easy to find even a good prospect. Most of the rich ore shoots that outcrop on the surface and pay from "the grass roots down" have all been grubstaked. Great portions of the world have been prospected so that prospectors must now go into country until now considered inaccessible or else spend more in testing each outcrop at depth. There are now a dozen or fifteen rich syndicates who are prepared to examine and purchase properties, but no mines are now to be found and attention is, of necessity, being turned to properties already in process of development.—Mining and Scientific Press.

A Chicago "professor" advocates a school for scientific spooning. But spooning is not a science; it is a sentiment; and science and sentiment don't mix. As soon as spooning is prompted by science it becomes guile and craft; and that plays the mischief with the whole game.

A new republic of Lower California, short on provisions, ammunition, money and friends, now must struggle along with an ordinary press agent. Dick Ferris has resigned as the president.

A San Bernardino man drank a bottle of beer in his home town and when he came to was in Wichita, Kan. If such a thing is possible, San Berdoo should demand safe and sane beer.

Mrs. Royal Phelps Carroll of Newport society, on her way to hunt lions in Africa, is going to discover that the kind she may meet have little respect for a large bank account.

In Philadelphia they tolled the new liberty bell on Decoration Day, to convey to all the idea of the mournful sacredness of the day. A right good idea, worthy of general adoption.

"Within 40 years the Indian will be a curiosity," says a Banning Indian agent. Those shown up on the moving picture film already are curiosities—to the real Indian.

In Omaha the terrific heat twisted the steel rails on a trolley line so that traffic was tied up. It is not reported that any passengers were fried to a crisp.

Colonel Roosevelt's attitude on international arbitration is pretty well described by the statement that "he is for peace except when there is a chance for a fight."

"Let the babies cry, it does them good," a woman lecturer is reported as saying. Well, possibly, in some cases. But how about it if it is a pin?

Aviators are forbidden to fly over London during coronation week, by order of the king. But how is it to be prevented if they want to fly?

The pacification of Mexico will not be accomplished, in some sections, by soothing syrup alone.

Jack Cudahy proposes to fly over Pike's peak in a balloon. Here's hoping he gets stranded on the top.

SALOON IN HEART OF

HELENA, MONT., HELD UP
HELENA, Mont., June 9.—The Atlas saloon, half a block from the heart of the business district of the city, was held up by two masked highwaymen yesterday morning at 12:30. The bartender and one old man were in the saloon at the time, and one bandit covered the men while the other went through the cash register, securing $55. As the men backed out of the door the bartender seized a revolver and emptied it at the men who rushed down Jackson street and up an alley.
